Sun damage—when UV light hits unprotected skin it changes DNA at the cellular level resulting in brown spots, wrinkles, broken blood vessels and uneven skin texture. Compare the skin on your face with a part of your body not exposed to the sun to see if you have sun damage.

Melasma—uneven dark patches most often on the face, typically influenced by hormones and/or sun exposure.

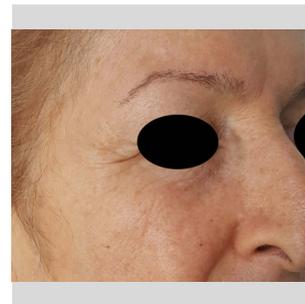

Fitzpatrick's Scale—a scale doctors use to determine skin type and risk of sun damage. This scale helps determine appropriate treatment parameters.
